Curtiss Flying Boats
TYPE

A modified type of Curtiss Flying Boats that made the epoch-marking trip across the Atlantic Ocean is available in smaller models suitable for either commercial or individual use.

Equipped Either with Liberty Motors or Curtiss Motors—$10,000 to $50,000

Ninety per cent of the United States Navy seaplanes and flying boats are Curtiss type. In war-time they proved themselves one of the most successful types, and now in peace, in this momentous journey across the ocean, they again prove themselves not only pioneers, but practical, every-day successful air boats for individual and commercial use.

Orders Should be Placed Now to insure getting a Curtiss Flying Boat this Summer. Naval orders must be completed first, but individual orders can now be taken to be filled as quickly as possible in rotation.

Hangars are already established at Port Washington, Long Island; Atlantic City, and Newport News, and others will be established along the Atlantic coast.

The America Trans-Oceanic Co.

505 Fifth Avenue, at 42nd Street—overlooking the Public Library—is the New York distributor for all Curtiss Flying Boats, Curtiss Airplanes and Motors.

Obituary

Edward Payson Call, Noted Publisher, Dies

Edward Payson Call, 64, business manager of the "Journal of Commerce" since 1913, died yesterday at his home in Larchmont Manor, N. Y., of pneumonia. He leaves a wife and four children.

Mr. Call was born in West Cambridge, Mass. He was educated at the Brimmer School in Boston. Entering newspaper work at an early age as private secretary to the late R. M. Pulitzer, then publisher of the "Boston Herald," he subsequently became advertising manager of that paper. He later became advertising manager of the "Philadelphia Press." From 1897 to 1902 he was publisher of the "New York Evening Post" and the "New York Mail and Express." He became publisher of the "New York Commercial" in 1904. He was assistant business manager of the "New York Times" for four years, leaving that position to become business manager of the "Journal of Commerce."

At the time of his death Mr. Call was treasurer of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association. He was a member of the City Club, the Horse Shoe Harbor and the Oak Tennis Clubs.

AARON ARONSOHN

The death last Thursday of Aaron Aronsohn in an airplane accident near Boulogne, France, while he was flying from London to Paris, was announced in a cablegram from Judge Julian W.

The Rose-bush of a Thousand Years
By MABEL WAGNALLS

A Story That Thrills

So engrossing—so dramatic—so beautiful that transferred it to the motion picture screen where, under the title of "Revolution" it is creating a real sensation. If you have seen the play, read the book which preserves all the beauty of the subject; if you haven't seen the play there's a big treat in store for you when you read it in book form.

The Baltimore Sun says: "The Rose-bush of a Thousand Years" is one of those exquisite little stories written straight from the heart that makes instant appeal to the hearts of others."

Mack to the Zionist Organization of America.

Mr. Aronsohn was a noted naturalist and agriculturist. After many years of research he discovered the origin of our wheat seed. He spent much time in an endeavor to produce a cultivated wheat which would be free from the diseases of the present crop. Mr. Aronsohn's work attracted the attention of the United States Department of Agriculture, and his experimental station in Palestine was supported by many Americans. For ten years he was attached to the Department of Agriculture as a dollar-a-year man.

Mr. Aronsohn was interested in the abatement of floods and did much to control the flow of the River Nile. He was consulted by Secretary of the Interior Lane on the abatement of the floods which destroyed so much property in the Mississippi and Ohio River valleys.

Mr. Aronsohn was interested in the cultivation of fruit trees, fodder and grape vines. His library of agricultural books, one of the greatest in the world, was destroyed by the Turkish army at the outbreak of the war. Mr. Aronsohn offered his services to the British army and was useful in aiding the Egyptian expeditionary forces in pointing out the hidden waterways in Palestine. He was attached to the Zionist Administrative Commission, which was appointed by King George, and he was on a Zionist mission when killed.

James McParland Dies; Famous as Detective

DENVER, May 19.—James McParland, seventy-five, famous Pinkerton detective, who gained national reputation for his work in connection with the murders which the Molly Maguires' Pennsylvania coal mining organization committed, died here to-day from the effects of an operation on his foot.

James McParland was born in Ireland. He came to this country two years after the Civil War. He worked as a tinsmith in Chicago, and during the lumber season worked in the Michigan forests. His first police job was with the Merchants' Police Agency. Later he went with Allan Pinkerton in the Chicago bureau.

When the Molly Maguires began their series of murders, McParland was sent to Pennsylvania to run down the leaders. He went to Pottsville, dressed as a miner. He worked in the mines, drank in the saloons and joined all the cliques in his efforts to get information. He was trusted by the gang, and in February, 1874, he was initiated into the Order of Ancient Hibernians, which was said to have been the cloak of the terrorist group. At this time he was known as James McKenna. He played his part so well that he was clubbed by the police, who thought him one of the leaders of the gang. He made secret reports to the mine owners, furnishing enough information to convict many Molly Maguires.

McParland was also famous for his work in the conviction of the murderer of Frank Steunenberg, once Governor of Idaho, by members of the Western Federation of Miners. He obtained a confession in 1906 from Harry Orchard, who is now serving a life term for the crime.

RICHARD STEVENS

Richard Stevens, head of the Stevens family of Hoboken and son of the founder of Stevens Institute of Technology, died of pneumonia Sunday morning in his home at Castle Point, Hoboken, after a short illness.

Mr. Stevens was born in Paris, France, fifty years ago. He was educated at St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., and was graduated from Columbia University in 1890 and from the Law School two years later. Mr. Stevens never practiced law.

Soon after the United States entered the war Mr. Stevens turned over Castle Stevens, his home in Hoboken, to the government as a convalescent home for soldiers. Mr. Stevens was interested in the Salvation Army, to which he gave a building in Hoboken. He was president of the Hoboken Land and Improvement Company, which represents the Stevens estate. He was United States Commissioner of Jurors of the District of New Jersey, a director of the First National Bank of Hoboken and a trustee of the Stevens Institute of Technology and the New Jersey Industrial School. For the last sixteen years he was Probation Officer for Hudson County, treasurer of Christ Hospital and president of the United Aid Society.

Mr. Stevens had won the Middle States tennis championship and the New Jersey State championship. He was treasurer of the United States Tennis Association. He was an enthusiastic yachtsman and a member of the New York Yacht Club. He was also a member of the Union Club and the Racquet and Tennis Club.

MRS. ADELPHA HOLMES

Proceedings in the Women's Court were stopped yesterday by Magistrate Marsh to pay tribute to Mrs. Adelphe Holmes, a negro social worker active in the work of the court, who died Sunday at 137 West 141st Street, where funeral services will be held to-day.

Mrs. Holmes was twenty-seven years old. She was a graduate of Tuskegee Institute. She first did social work in Chicago. She was married to Lieutenant Joseph E. Holmes two weeks before he sailed for France.

Addresses were made in the Women's Court by Magistrates Marsh and Cobb, and expressions of sympathy were read from Magistrates Barlow and McGeehan. Mrs. John Glenn, of the Home Service Department of the American Red Cross, also spoke.

EDWARD HOLBROOK

STAMFORD, Conn., May 19.—Edward Holbrook, president of the Gorham Manufacturing Company of New York, died at his country home at Strawberry Hill this afternoon, after a long illness. He was about seventy years old.

Mr. Holbrook also was president of the Maiden Lane Realty Company and the Silver Smiths' Company, and director of the American Brass Company, the American Coal Company, the Bau-Site Company, the Garfield Safe Deposit Company, the General Fire Extinguisher Company, the Hanover National Bank, the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company, the Rhode Island Hospital Trust Company and the Whiting Manufacturing Company.
